The Chairman Goes Nuts

Moscow Is Great Stuff in the Bronx

For the first time in the history of either major party Edward J. Flynn, chairman of the Democratic National Committee, at his press conference in New York Wednesday attacked the integrity of the whole United States press. "The newspapers of the country are under a real dictatorship, a financial dictatorship of their advertisers," he was quoted by the Associated Press.

"Their editorials about dictatorship," he continued, "are not on the level. They should clean their own houses before they talk about other dictatorships."

Do you get what Mr. Flynn is saying?

He is saying that the condition of American newspapers is so bad that even if our country were actually headed for a dictatorship the newspapers would have no right to talk about it.

While he was merely boss of Bronx borough, a New York City subdivision which has no major newspapers of its own, it was all right for Mr. Flynn to attack the big papers over in Man-

Germans Go Back to Old Attack Style

Air Siege of England Renewed in Earlier Style Attacks

LONDON—(AP)—Formations of hundreds of warplanes, attacked England Thursday as Germans switched back to the mass daylight style of raids against London and other areas.

Most of the German fighter-bombers were forced back by anti-aircraft fire and British planes but some managed to penetrate London defenses and dropped bombs in the capital area.

The raids started early Thursday morning when 20 planes crossed near the Thames and tried to force their way toward London and they were quickly repulsed.

A few minutes later a group of more than 100 appeared and some of these bombed the London area.

Then an even larger formation crossed the Kent coast flying high above clouds. Altogether five alarms have been sounded in London by mid-afternoon.

Government Not to Leave
LONDON—(AP)—The British government has no intention of leaving London despite the recent heavy bombing, it was made known in parliamentary circles Thursday.

To Open Burma Road
LONDON—(AP)—Authoritative sources said Thursday that the Burma road which Britain closed for three months last July 17 in an effort to improve relations with Japan, will be reopened to arms traffic to China at midnight Thursday night (11:30 a. m.).

In Ching Chinese labor squads drew up strategic points of the Burma road under orders to reconstruct the lifeline highway as fast as Japanese bombing planes could destroy it.

New English Destruction
BERLIN—(AP)—The German high command drew a picture Thursday of new destruction inflicted by its air raiders on Britain of sea-war successes, of futile British attacks on the Reich and at the same time Berlin reports said that daylight waves of Nazi warplanes were over London again.

Meanwhile, the Germans claimed a new defensive air raid weapon Thursday—a super search light which would blind British night raiders and make them fly directly into its rays, where they would be easy marks for anti-aircraft guns.

DNB said the weapon was used successfully Wednesday night against a British bomber on the Dutch coast. The bomber, the agency said, was brought down in flames.

1,464 Men Are Signed Up in Hope Alone

Registration
Throughout
County Goes
Along Smoothly

Registration in Hempstead county went off Wednesday like clock-work, according to Frank Hill, Hempstead county clerk, and 3,716 men between the ages of 21-36 signed up for selective military service, a total of 1,464 registered in the city.

There were 35 registration places at the different county precincts and all had reported to the county clerk before 10:15 Wednesday night. The total registration for the county was promptly telephoned to headquarters in Little Rock.

Registration Day as a whole was very successful. Conscription had been in the headlines of newspapers and thoroughly advertised throughout the county. Most of the people understood the procedure and many offered aid in registration. The county clerk, American Legion, school teachers and Democratic Central Committee men served.

In a week or ten days the signed index cards will be drawn at Washington, weeding out the one to be exempted. This is the way that men who are to be called out will be determined. The county draft board, composed of Henry Taylor, Clifford Franks and H. B. Barr, announced Thursday that they were ready to begin the work of drafting.

Hope Ward one led the county precincts in the number registered, with a total of 388; Ward four was second, with 378, and ward two was third with 368. Fulton led the county boxes with a total of 258 registrations.

Press Dictated to by Its Advertisers, Says Flynn

Says 90% of U. S. Papers Are Against Roosevelt

NEW YORK—(AP)—A dictatorship of financial interests and advertisers over the newspapers of the country was charged Wednesday by Edward J. Flynn, Democratic national chairman.

"I wonder if they would dare print the fact that the newspapers of the country are under a real dictatorship, a financial dictatorship of their advertisers?" Flynn asked at a press conference. "Their editorials about dictatorships are not on the level. They (the newspapers) should clean their own houses before they talk about other dictatorships."

Asked whether he included all newspapers in his charge of a "dictated press," Flynn said he was "talking about a majority of papers who claim independence in their news columns."

In answer to a question, Flynn said he had not discussed his views on the press with President Roosevelt.

Challenge to Papers
Asked whether he would "call the Democratic papers in this country controlled too," Flynn said he believed that both Democratic and Republican papers should give as much space to one side as to the other.

"Would you say that the financial interests you mention dictate to the Democratic papers?" Flynn was asked.

"No," he replied, "not as much as the Republican."

Aircraft Factories Form Front Line in the Sky Battle Between Great Britain and Germany

Production Rate Is Key to Victory,
Say Britons

By PAUL MANNING

NEA London Correspondent

LONDON—Aircraft production still remains the key to success in this Battle of Britain. That is currently the candid opinion of the London Sunday Dispatch.

"If Britain's aircraft production falls below its maximum possible output, there can be little hope for victory. Planes are the complete key to this war, and upon their production depends the future."

The outlook for achievement of this maximum output and eventual parity in plane production with Germany does not look too bright at the moment. Output in one airplane factory of 1500 workers has dropped to a new low because air raids have driven night shift workers to the shelters.

Recently during one week, 80,000 working hours were lost by a night shift reluctant to continue work during a raid in their 95 per cent plate-glass factory. The result was a series of nine-hour periods spent in air raid shelters. According to several workers and managers, this situation is occurring in more than one factory.

Nazis Far Ahead When War Began
Even if this slow-down is only temporary, it is doubtful whether numerical equality with Germany will be achieved for a long time to come. On the basis of cold figures the enormous head start gained by Germany prior to August, 1940, still remains great.

No actual figures, only percentages, have been released by Britain's Ministry of Aircraft Production during the past year stating their airplane output.

It is known that Germany's aim was to have an air strength of 8200 front-line machines when she clashed with Britain, and behind this a reserve of 100 per cent. If this goal was reached she would then have had 16,400 planes with a chain of factories ready to replace losses and turn out reserves.

This 16,400 figure may not have been reached by September, 1939, but it was certainly achieved during the six months of quiet along the Western Front.

Germans Lose 6500 Planes
If 16,400 were manufactured by September, 1939, and a minimum of 900 machines added each month through December, the German air arm would have begun 1940 with at least 20,000 apart from losses and normal training crappings.

From January to May, when she started her shattering march across the low countries, another 5000—at the rate of 1800 a month—would have been produced. Add a further 5400 for June, July and August of 1940 to make a total of 30,400 since the Luftwaffe was first formed in 1933.

This figure optimistically assumes the Nazis fulfilled all prewar time-tables of deliveries, overcame the normal bottlenecks of engine production and suffered not the loss of a single man-hour from R. A. F. raids

Draftees Still to Build Homes

FHA Won't Discriminate Against Them on Loans

Many inquiries have been received through lending institutions, contractors and lumber dealers in regard to provisions set up by the Federal Housing Administration concerning loans to applicants eligible for draft under the Selective Draft Act.

Quoting from a news release by Stewart McDonald, Federal Housing Administrator, Washington, D. C. issued September 29, 1940:

"Men of military age may continue to buy, build, or modernize homes of their own under the Federal Housing Administration program, and lending institutions may continue to advance money for this purpose, just as they did before the passage of the Selective Draft Act. There will be no discrimination by the Federal Housing Administration against men of military age, and there will be none by the institutions lending Federal Housing Administration insured funds."

Telegrams to the same effect were sent to the United States Savings and Loan League, the Mortgage Bankers Association of America, and the National Association of Mutual Savings Banks. "Inquiries from many members of these associations indicated they were greatly interested in a statement of the Federal Housing Administration's policy concerning insured loans to citizens entering the military service. Legislation has recently been enacted by congress to protect the interests of those called to military service. Needless to say, the Federal Housing Administration is in complete accord with the objectives of such legislation and will follow an administrative policy which will preserve the rights of lending institutions under the Insurance Contract and at the same time enable them to extend to those in military service the protection to which they are

154 Miles WPA Road in County

Farm-Market
Roads Constructed
Last 5 Years

A total of 154.2 miles of farm-to-market roads was constructed in Hempstead county by the WPA in cooperation with county officials during the five year period ending June 30, 1940, a special report just released by Floyd Sharp, state WPA administrator, discloses. These roads, the report said, opened up thousands of acres of land heretofore without market outlets during inclement weather and have proven of value to consolidated school transportation systems.

A complete summary of activities under the classification of highways, roads and streets for the county in addition to the above mentioned roads shows 143 miles of primary roads built or repaired; 20,371 feet of urban streets and alleys; 56,700 feet of miscellaneous roads; 440 culverts and bridges with a total length of 10,796 feet; 7,174 feet of curbs and gutters and 28,387 feet of sidewalks. Most of the culverts were of permanent construction.

Reporting on other activities in the county, Mr. Sharp said that in cooperation with county, municipal and school officials, 41 public buildings were constructed or repaired during the same period of which 13 were educational buildings. Others were: 9 recreational buildings; 2 office and administrative buildings; 1 hospital and medical building; 2 residence buildings for employees of public institutions; 7 garages and maintenance shops; 8 miscellaneous.

In the field of outdoor recreation facilities there were constructed or repaired 1 stadium, 1 park; 6 tennis courts; 1 pool.

Work on publicly owned or operated utilities and sanitation was reported as follows: 1 reservoir and storage tank; 2,350 feet of water mains and aqueducts; 3,524 feet of storm and sanitary sewers; 1,603 sanitary privies and septic tanks. Mosquito control included 1,024 acres drained and 11,103 feet of ditch and pipe.

Miscellaneous projects included: 1 artificial lake.

Corn has been found in primitive earthworks of the mound builders.

Hope Team to Play Nashville

Scrappers Will Have Dope Advantage Friday

Suffering from five straight defeats this season the Hope Bobcats will go to Nashville Friday for a game with the strong Scrappers Friday night.

The Bobcats have been working hard this week trying to build up their defense against passes and also to put more spark in their offense. Bundy and Bradshaw showed up well in scrimmage, especially on the defense.

All the boys are in pretty fair shape with the exception of Jewell and Cumbe. It is doubtful whether either will play Friday night. And of course Jimmy Simms will be out several weeks yet. On a whole the boys are in better shape than they have been since the first game of the season Coach Foy Hammons reported.

The Scrappers will have a big dope advantage over the Bobcats. While the Hope lads were being trounced by Jonesboro 34-0 last week, the Howard county boys ran roughshod over Prescott 30-0. The Scrappers have two fast backs in Gosnell and Underwood.

The Hope Junior team will go to Texarkana for a game with the Texas Juniors. At Hammons stadium here at 3:45 the second team will play the Texarkana seconds.

HOT SPRINGS—Col. H. L. McAlister of Conway, commanding officer of the 153rd infantry of Arkansas National Guard, announced Thursday that the regiment will probably be called into Federal service November 25.

Col. McAlister said that he was sending notices to the regiment's 78 officers Thursday to prepare for mobilization on that date. It is conditioned on the issuance of a formal call by President Roosevelt, and the completion of sufficient quarters at Camp Robison to house the guardsmen.

Col. McAlister announced that he is sending five officers of the regiment, including Capt. John M. Duffie of Hope, to Fort Benning, Ga., for special training.

First Statement

By the Associated Press
Clarence Dykstra declared his first public statement as draft director Thursday stating "those who thought we were soft and supine and as a Democracy, could not move with effectiveness may be disappointed."

The 57-year old University of Wisconsin President, who has taken oath of the new position in the office of Secretary Stimson but a short time earlier, added "the news is that the registration went off more than happily with enthusiasm."

The exact number registered is still in a process of tabulation but Washington officials predicted, on a basis of incomplete returns, that it would exceed by about 250,000 the original estimate of 16,400,000 men.

Reduced Prices
At Saenger

Many New Pictures
Have Been Booked
Recently

Remmel Young, manager of the Saenger Theater announced Thursday that a new price policy is now in effect at the Saenger. The new price reduction is 10c and 25c, plus tax and entitles the patrons to any seat in the house. These prices prevail three days of every week, Wednesday through Friday, Sunday, Monday and Tuesday admissions will remain the same — 10c for children, 25c and 35c for adults, plus tax. Saturday prices are 10c and 20c all day.

These new admissions will entitle everyone to see the greatest array of pictures ever released from Hollywood. Some of the pictures coming within the next few months which are outstanding productions at these prices are: "Bride and Prejudice," "When the Daughters Wed," "Gold Rush People," "City for Conquest," "Young People," "Kit Carson," "Flowing Gold," "Quarterback," "Wyoming," "Westerner," "Dr. Kildare Goes Home," "Rangers of Fortune," "No Time for Comedy," "Dispatch From Reuters," and many others.

"Knut Rockne, All American" Coming to Saenger Sunday

Knut Rockne a Hero to His Screen Portrayer, Pat O'Brien

Role of 'Knut Rockne' Fulfills Star's Ambition

Pat O'Brien, who has been living the life of Knute Rockne for the past two months, says it's possible for a man to remain a hero to his screen portrayer. Even when that portrayal costs 19 pounds of flesh and some 200 hours of sleep, O'Brien plays the title role in "Knut Rockne, All American," the new Warner Bros. picture coming to the Saenger Sunday.

"Rock was my boyhood hero," says Pat, "and nothing has happened since to change my regard for him. He was still a hero to me when I was crawling out of bed two hours early to rush to the studio to put on my character makeup."

When Warner Bros. acquired from Mrs. Bonnie Rockne, the right to film her husband's life story, O'Brien says he made up his mind he simply had to play Rock.

"I've wanted to do parts before, but never like I wanted to do this one," he says. "I knew it would be tough. And I knew I'd be in for a lot of raps if I got it."

"Rock was, and still is, a hero to millions of persons besides myself. A lot of these people knew him far better than I did. Some, I hope a great many of them are going to think I did all right. Others are bound to compare us with real Rockne and find me wanting. Still others, I hope only a few, are going to rate me a first class bum in the part."

"Realizing all that, I still wanted to do the role more than I ever have any other. I knew I could at least bring sincerity and the warmest regard for the man I was playing, to the characterization."

When he learned he was to realize his great ambition, O'Brien immediately plunged into as intensive a preparatory campaign as any actor ever had conducted. He cut down his weight from a bit over 135 to a shade under 170. He read all the books about Rockne, and the Notre Dame coach's own autobiography. He practiced the Rockne mannerisms and learned the Rockne idiosyncrasies. He got hold of fight talk records the great coach had made and played them over by the hour, until he had mastered Rockne's peculiar staccato delivery and his voice inflections. He pored through hundreds of Rockne anecdotes, seeking some new facts to his character.

While he was doing all that, he spent scores of hours with Perc Westmore, experimenting and testing for the makeup that, perfected at long last, gives him a truly striking facial resemblance to Rockne. Then there were hours of camera and microphone tests.

The voice was no sinecure, even with the records. Pat got a lot of helpful coaching from J. Arthur Haley, Notre Dame's graduate manager, and Nick Lukats, Marty Brill and other men who had played football for Rockne. When Mrs. Rockne arrived in Hollywood to assist with the production, she took over his post-graduate course.

"I thought," Pat says, "that I knew Rock about as well as anyone could until I met Bonnie. Then I began really to learn about him."

"She taught me, among many other things, his trick of driving home an important point by repetition. She gave me little gestures and mannerisms that nobody else could have known in such detail. Yet they all go to make up the true picture of the man."

"She also gave me an insight into his character I could have gained no other way. I learned about Rock, the devoted husband and father—the fellow who sang a funny song about a boarding house where they serve ham and eggs three times a day, to his youngsters, and who anxiously rehearsed his speeches for his wife's approval. It made the man I was playing a real human being to me, and more than ever, an idol."

Knowing Harmon Is Likely to Go By Any Second, Regardless of White Play Is Originally Aimed, Michigan Becomes Free-Style Blocking Team

Another Dixieland Donnybrook ball of cotton that the Crimson Tide heads the football program for Oct. 19, with Alabama and Tennessee, two of the south's few undefeated teams, renewing one of the most intense rivalries anyone ever cooked up, in Birmingham.

The party of the first part can be rated no more than a "good" Alabama team, but you can bet your last will rise to flood proportions in an effort to stop the Vols.

Wally Weber, the Wolverines' freshman coach and scout, calls the waterboys and trainers who dash onto fields between timeouts "the I. W. W.—information, wind and water."

Michigan is mightier than ever, yet for the first time in memory the one with Ann Arbor is not the most important game on the Ohio State schedule.

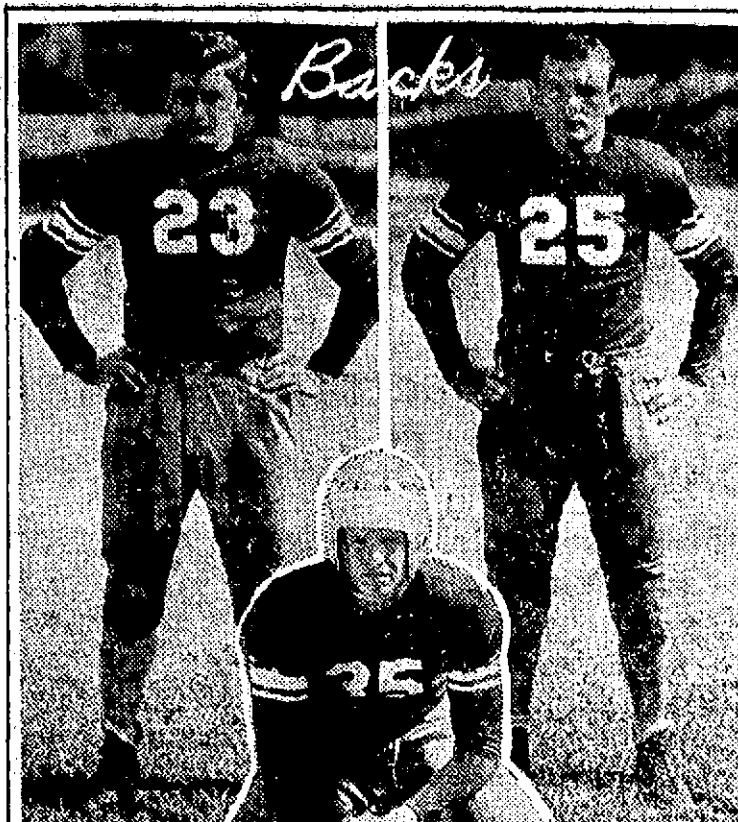

Cornell, which spotted the Buckeyes two touchdowns and then came on to win in spectacular fashion in Columbus a year ago, is the outfit the bugs along High street want shackled. . . . at Lhasa, Oct. 26.

Charley Maag, who beat Minnesota last season and Purdue this autumn for Ohio State with placement kicks, stresses that it isn't really the kicker who makes the goal.

"The man who holds the ball and the other nine in front of him each has a share and deserve credit," asserts the modest Buckeye. "One slip by any of them and there'd be no place-kick, no matter how straight the ball was booted."

With the intramural six-man game, Robert M. Hutchins, president of the University of Chicago, finally has the 10-cent football he advocated.

University of Arkansas Backs

FAYETTEVILLE — Three Arkansas backs who deserve a large share of credit for the improved running game of the Razorbacks are Jay Lawson of Harrison, Aubrey Neal of Clearendon and Meredith "Cotton" Jones of Helena. Lawson was kept out of action last season by an injury and is just now beginning to show the form that brought him fame at Catholic High, Little Rock, two years ago. Neal won his letter as an Arkansas sophomore last season and is a greatly improved player as a junior. Jones is playing his ball-carrying chores.

Young Attends Theater Meet

U. S. Films Lose Out in Europe But Gain in S. A.

Loss of European and Asiatic markets for American motion pictures because of the war has compelled Hollywood to reduce expenses and at the same time launch a tremendous drive for additional markets in South America, Remmel Young, Saenger-Rialto theaters manager, reported Wednesday on his return home from Memphis where he attended a three-day convention of the Tri-State Theater Owners association.

Georgia Tech is a slight favorite over Vanderbilt in another southern feature. Tulane is long overdue and should beat Rice. North Carolina is favored over North Carolina State and Mississippi gets the nod over Duke.

Northwestern Continues Match Against Wisconsin

Northwestern's rampant Wildcats should make it three in a row with Wisconsin as their victims in a mid-west thriller. Iowa and Indiana are a toss-up.

Notre Dame should have little trouble with Carnegie Tech.

Missouri is favored over Iowa State. Nebraska should rout Kansas; Oklahoma and Kansas State are too close to call.

HIGHLIGHTS FROM LATEST BOOKS

A Superb Study of Why Wilson Failed in Paris

At an hour when America is struggling to keep out of war, you can imagine no more timely, important book than Arthur D. Howden Smith's biography, "Mr. House of Texas" (Funk & Wagnalls: $3.50). Here is the whole amazing story of Colonel House, man closest to President Wilson in the last war, his influence in American and European war and peace. Just a lot of his penetrating book is excerpted here:

The only major change which Mr. House made with the passing years, in this contemporary estimate, was a strengthening of his conviction that the chief element in the failure of American policy in Paris was the presence of Mr. Wilson.

"You mustn't blame him," he said, again and again. "He believed he was doing right. But it was the sort of situation he wasn't used to or fitted to handle. Up to then I had gone out and wrestled with the trouble-makers, the kind of men he didn't like or know how to handle. He didn't know how to handle men like Clemenceau and Lloyd George. Damned good men, my friend, good politicians, who had spent their lives struggling for power."

"It hurt him to do that sort of thing. It hurt something in him deep down, something very fine. And when that was hurt, he wasn't at his best. He got mad. And he could get mad faster and better than any man I know. Why, I remember that just before he was to leave Paris, after the Treaty was signed, one of the Frenchmen who was friendly to us came to me and said that he had given no answer to an invitation from Poincare to a state dinner."

"I went to ask him about it. He said, 'No I'm not going. I'll be damned if I do. I'd choke if I had to sit beside Poincare again.' But you can't refuse, Governor," I told him. "It isn't you, alone, who are involved. This is a compliment from the president of the French Republic to you as President of the United States, as the representative of the American people. You would be insulting the French people in the name of the American people."

"Well, he went, but he sat beside Poincare glowering, and he hardly said a word all evening, and left as early as he could."

Zivic's Got Fighting Blood

Youngest of Fistic Family is Real Champion

By HARRY GRAYSON

NEW YORK — Most fight followers were astounded when Ferdinand Zivic, a despised short-ender, had Henry Armstrong flat on the floor at the end of 15 rounds in lifting the world welter-weight championship at Madison Square Garden the other night.

They remembered too many of the Pittsburgh lad's early reverses as a professional. Practically everybody beat Ferdinand, who took the name Fritzke when he joined the money ranks.

But the youngest and last of the Five Fighting Zivics got going in 1937, when he knocked out Johnny Jadiek and repulsed Bobby Pacheco, Chuck Woods and other one of two.

And then, as his brother Jack, a fine lightweight in his day, remarked at the time, Fritzke had fighting blood put in his veins.

Fritzke nearly died of pneumonia. It was Jack's blood in a transfusion that turned the tide.

Doctors said Fritzke would never fight again, but he was back in the thick of things on Christmas night of that year, when he dropped a decision to Tommy Bland in Pittsburgh.

Best Angutt to Earn Match With Armstrong

An attack of pneumonia seemed to improve Tony Galento, and had the same effect on Fritzke Zivic.

He started rolling in 1938, and has been hitting it up in high ever since. His only serious setback since his sick spell was a knockout at the fists of Milt Aron in Chicago, but he had Aron in the bag four times before he was clipped.

Yet Fritzke Zivic was doing one-night stands around the country until he qualified for the Armstrong match by beating Sammy Angott, the N. B. A. lightweight leader, in a non-title affair.

In seven years of boxing, Fritzke has learned to do it all well. He can place his head against that of a rival come home, and he can box like blazes at long range. He has a fine left jab and hook as well as the right hand uppeper to the body and chin which upset Armstrong. He takes a good belt and is totally unafraid. Battered Armstrong may hang up gloves.

Zivic is now matched to meet Al Davis of Brownsville in a 15-round non-title battle at the Garden, Nov. 15, and signed to give Armstrong another chance, Jan. 17.

Those close to Armstrong doubt that he will be ready to return to the wars in mid-January, however, and question whether he will ever fight again.

Zivic opened all the old cuts and some new ones. Armstrong has plenty of money, and may no longer have the urge when his wounds heal.

Armstrong's slashing style, made all of his many fights hard ones. Those who saw the tough and cruel party at the Garden the other night would not give the Armstrong who has been so badly battered much of a chance against Zivic in a return bout.

For the Fritzke Zivic, who so suddenly arrived after a slow start, is far from being a chase champion.

Men's Hands Smaller Women's Larger

HUTCHINSON, Kans.—(A)—G. Emery, who has been making rings for 34 years, says men's hands are getting smaller, women's larger. "Women's rings now average a size 10 or two larger than when I first came down at a jeweler's bench, and men's hands, by and large, are much smaller," says Emery.

The "soft office work" that men and the athletics in which most women are participating are responsible, Emery believes.

Education Is Theme of Discussion At Meeting of Bay View Club

The Bay View Reading club was entertained at the home of Mrs. E. E. White on Wednesday afternoon, with Mrs. T. R. Billingsly and Miss Beryl Henry associate hostesses. Gorgeous bowls and vases of golden marigolds added to the attractiveness of the room. Mrs. J. A. Henry presided and opened the meeting by calling for the minutes and roll call, which the secretary Mrs. T. R. Billingsly read. The members had been asked to answer to roll call with some school experience which caused a great deal of amusement. Miss Beryl Henry, leader of the program, had for her subject "Educators." She presented Mrs. Claude Agee who gave a sketch of the life of Horace Mann, educator, lawyer, congressman and leader in the development of the free public school system as it is today. He established at Lexington the first Normal school in the U. S. A. and was at one time president of Antioch college.

Mrs. E. E. White followed with a splendid paper on Dr. Willis A. Sutton, an outstanding Southern educator and founder of the National Honor Society and will be remembered in Hope as the guest speaker at the state convention of the Honor society in 1939. Dr. Sutton was at one time superintendent of the public school system in Atlanta, Ga.

Miss Henry next gave a short sketch of a number of women who have reached great heights in the educational circles of the nation, and especially Miss Willie Lawson who is so well known in Hope whose name appears in Who's Who in America and who is an educational executive secretary. Eighteen members and the following guests were present, Mrs. Fred Harrison of Arkadelphia, Mrs. Clifton Rule of Pine Bluff, Mrs. Mittie McCameron of Fort Worth, Texas, and Mrs. Edward McFadden of Hope. The hostesses served a delicious salad plate with tea.

Cabe - Bayless Marriage Solemnized

Of state-wide interest is the marriage of Miss Mary Charlotte Bayless, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Roland W. Bayless of Gurdion, to Charles Louis Cabe, son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles L. Cabe of Texarkana, which was a beautiful ceremony at 8 Sunday morning, October 13, at the First Methodist church in Gurdion.

Southern snail and Queen Anne's lace were used in decorating the church. Tall baskets of white chrysanthemums and white lilies in wrought iron candelabra marked the altar, where the Rev. A. C. Caraway, performed the service. The couple knelt for the nuptial blessing on a white imported Chinese prayer rug.

Miss Ann Cook of Texarkana, pianist and niece of the bridegroom, played the wedding music. Paul Baringer of Whelan sang "Because" and "I Love You Truly."

Harold Cabe, brother of the bridegroom, and John Allen Culp, brother-in-law of the bride, were ushers. Horace Cabe was his brother's best man. Mrs. John Allen Culp of Gurdion, sister of the bride, was her only attendant and wore a costume of navy blue with wine accessories. The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, was lovely in a suit of soldier blue, trimmed in blue fox, with which she wore black hat and accessories. She carried a bouquet of orchids.

Mrs. Bayless, mother of the bride and bridegroom's mother, Mrs. Cabe, wore black costumes and flowers were gardenias.

Immediately after the ceremony, Horace and Harold Cabe, assisted by their parents, Mr. and Mrs. Cabe of Texarkana, entertained with a breakfast at their country home, near Gurdion.

After a wedding trip to Florida and Cuba, Mr. and Mrs. Cabe will be at home in Gurdion, where Mr. Cabe is owner of a department store. Mrs. Cabe is a graduate of Gurdion High School and past president of the Junior Kadohadacho Club and a member of the state board of the Junior Federation, A. F. W. C.

Mr. Cabe, who has traveled abroad, is a graduate of Southern Methodist University. He is president of the Gurdion Board of Trade. The article above was taken from the "Arkansas Gazette" and will be of interest to the Hope friends of the bride, for she was born in the city. Among the out-of-town guests at the wedding were Mrs. Cabe's sister, Mrs. K. G. Hamilton, Mr. Hamilton, and their daughter, Carolyn of Hope.

Mrs. Comer Boyett Entertains Wednesday Contract Club

The members of the Wednesday Contract bridge club reversed days and met on Tuesday at the home of one of the members, Mrs. Comer Boyett. Two tables were arranged for the guests in the attractive card rooms and after several games, scores were counted with Mrs. Dick Forster receiving the high score prize.

Guests other than the club members were Mrs. J. W. Branch, Mrs. W. R. Herndon, and Mrs. Dick Forster. At the conclusion of the games, the hostess served a delightful desert course.

Eleven Members Attend Meeting Of Kappa Neel Hooking Club

Mrs. W. M. Cantley invited the members of the Kappa Neel Hooking club to her home on Wednesday morning for an all-day meeting. During the afternoon the hostess served sandwiches and "cokes."

Wednesday Contract Club Meets With Mrs. Syd McMath.

Two tables were arranged for the players at the weekly meeting of the Wednesday club at the home of Mrs. Syd McMath. Several congenial games were played with Mrs. Kelley Bryant receiving the high score for the members and Mrs. Roy Powell receiving high score for the guests.

At the conclusion of the games the hostess served delicious pie with coffee to the guests and members of the club. Mrs. W. R. Herndon and Mrs. Roy Powell were the guests.

Mr. and Mrs. O. A. Graves Compliment Visiting Ministers

The main dining room of the Barlow formed the setting for a beautiful luncheon on Wednesday when Mr. and Mrs. O. A. Graves chatted with time to honor several visitors in the city.

Placed on a mirror reflector in the center of the luncheon table was a crystal bowl containing miniature yellow chrysanthemums surrounded by red chrysanthemums with yellow centers.

Covers were laid for the Rev. and Mrs. Fred Harrison of Arkadelphia, The Rev. and Mrs. E. C. Rule of Pine Bluff, the Rev. and Mrs. Kenneth L. Spore, Master Harlan Spore, Miss Beryl Henry, and Mr. and Mrs. O. A. Graves.

Personal Mention

Mrs. Harold Wright (Elizabeth Stuart, of Tampa, Texas is the house guest of Mr. and Mrs. C. C. Sprang-ins.

Mrs. Comer Boyett, Mrs. Dick Forster, and Mrs. Lile Moore were Wednesday guests of Mrs. Alston Foster at her country home near Fulton.

Mr. and Mrs. J. Proctor Hill and little son "Phlip" of El Dorado are spending a few days with Mrs. Hill's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Lon Sanders, and other relatives and friends in the city.

Mrs. R. B. Thompson and daughter, Miss Alma Thompson of Texarkana were Wednesday guests of Mr. and Mrs. Irwin Grey.

WE THE WOMEN

Kidding About Draft Dodging Isn't Funny—It's Cruel

By RUTH MILLETT
Jim and Mary have been engaged for four years. Not that they approve of long engagements. It has taken them that long to get fairly secure jobs in the same city so that, together, they can finance their marriage.

Last summer they decided that they could marry this fall. They worked out a budget, started buying furniture, and planned a small but entirely satisfactory wedding. That is, satisfactory to Mary. Jim would have been pleased with much less fuss and bother.

The "Fun" Begins
But no sooner had they invited their friends to their wedding, and Mary had started looking for her trousseau, than a blight fell on the event they had expected to be perfect.

The people who worked in Mary's office started kidding her: "So you are marrying a draft dodger."

And when she shopped, clerks were not above getting chummy enough to say the same thing.

Of course it was worse for Jim. The wise guys in his office even nicknamed him Dodger.

Spells Their Happiness
None of these people knew that they were being cruel—as, of course, they were. They were giving in to the mean streak in human nature that hates to see other people completely happy and pleased with life.

Their determination to spoil things a little was so well cloaked in humor they didn't even know they were being cruel.

But they managed to take the bright edge off the happiness of Mary and Jim. They managed to dull a little the day the young couple had looked forward to and worked toward for four years.

There has been too much of this kind of damage done already. What do we want young people to do? To quit getting married?

Of course not. We know life can't be a mark time; that it has to go on as usual. So let's put a stop to wisecracks about draft dodgers.

MIND YOUR MANNERS

T. M. REG. U. S. PAT. OFF.

Test your knowledge of correct social usage by answering the following questions, then checking against the authoritative answers below:

1. Must you stand up to let latecomers to a movie pass by to their places?
2. Is it necessary to say "Sorry" when you pass in front of others in taking a seat at a movie?
3. Should you leave a movie at an exciting moment or at the very last scene, if you have to climb over a row of people to do so?
4. Is it good manners to hiss when government officials appear in a newsreel?
5. How can a woman manage not to drop her gloves when she rises at the end of a movie? What would you do if—
You are a woman at a movie and someone behind you asks if you would mind taking off your hat—
(a) Say, "I'm so sorry" and take it off?
(b) Say nothing, but take it off?
Answers

1. Yes. Don't make them crowd by you and run the risk of falling over your feet. (If you don't stand up it really serves you right if you get your feet stepped on.)
2. Yes.
3. No. Wait until the exciting moment is over, so that those you must pass in front of won't miss any of the scene.
4. No. For even though you may not approve of them, they represent the government of your country, and should be treated with courtesy—not with disrespect.
5. She can put them in her coat pocket or in her bag when she is first seated.

Best "What Would You Do?" solution—(a). You owe the person an apology, for you shouldn't have waited to be asked.

Living Their Young Days Over

There were only 65 of them this year—those old soldiers of the South who attended the annual United Confederate Veterans' reunion at Washington. But they had a grand time reliving the days of their fighting youth. Above, J. W. Gwaltney, left, of Roanoke, Va., and T. N. Harrison in Hollywood

By PAUL HARRISON, NEA Service Correspondent

Calm, Leisurely Edgar Eelwyn Has Only One Producer's Trait — a Stomach Ulcer

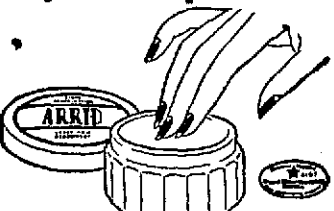

HOLLYWOOD — Edgar Selwyn would be unique among Hollywood producers if he didn't have a stomach ulcer. That affliction, shared by so many movie executives that it's a stock joke, betrays a nervousness which Selwyn doesn't show. He's quiet and leisurely in manner, uses no superlatives, and seems to be as amused as an outsider by the business in which he has played many important parts during 28 years.

As a Broadway actor, author and manager, Selwyn (brother of the almost equally prominent Arch) rates a full page in Who's Who in the Theater, and that doesn't even mention his picture activities. He had progressed to membership in the inner council of brass hats at Metro when he decided it wasn't much fun. Now he's back in active production and is preparing three stories for the screen.

Money No Incentive
He has been at Metro 12 years and never has had a contract. Irving Thalberg begged him to come here in 1928, when everyone was panicky about the new medium of sound. Money was no incentive because Selwyn had a cool $3,000,000 in his jeans. And Hollywood was no great novelty because Selwyn himself, in 1917, had bought the studio now occupied by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer.

"But I agreed to come—at no salary and with no interference," he recalls. "I said I'd make one picture and then we'd see. So I did a film called 'The Girl in the Show,' with Bessie Love. It was terrible and they loved it. I got a big bonus and a big salary retroactive to the starting date, and then I was ashamed to leave."

ings of a little ex-furrier named Adolph Zukor in 1912. "Arch and I had a play brokerage company and we owned or controlled from 250 to 300 plays," he said. "Zukor, who'd been making one and two-reelers, came to us and outlined plans for Famous Players, saying he wanted to make features based on tested stage properties. We were sitting there licking our chops at the thought of all the money he was about to offer us, and then he concluded by asking us to invest $2500 for a quarter interest in the company. We threw him out."

"Later, of course, Zukor's Famous Players became Paramount. Oh, well," Selwyn soon organized All Star Feature Film Co., and played the lead in the first picture it made. That was "Pierre of the Plains," a story he now is getting ready for John Carroll and M-G-M.

Selwyn also acted in Cecil De Mille's second picture, "The Arab," lured by the then fantastic offer of $5000 for two weeks. Reason he was paid so much, he discovered, was because he once had discharged De Mille as an incompetent stage director, and DeMille wanted to prove he knew a thing or two.

In 1917, when Samuel Goldfish left M-G-M with a check for $1,000,000 for his share of the Goldfish name, Selwyn and they formed a company. That marked the changing of the Goldfish name, using his own "Gold," he borrowed the "wyn" from Selwyn.

Their business association didn't endure, but they're still friends and Selwyn greatly admires Goldwyn as the only movie showman of consistent courage and vision. Of course they have quarreled occasionally, as everyone does with Sam. When they do, Selwyn telephones him and says, "You ——— so-and-so—give me my name back!"

Shall We Feed Europe?

Americans have the biggest hearts in all the world. Any nation of Europe that has ever endured suffering of any kind, from war or famine, knows that to be a fact.

And that's why the problem America faces today is one of the toughest it ever had to decide: Shall Americans help feed European victims of Nazi aggression this winter?

Under ordinary circumstances, the answer would be easy. It would be a trifling "YES," prompted by the Sinks of coins, gladly given. Under the usual conditions, loads of food and clothing and medical supplies would already be on their way.
But these are not ordinary times.
War still rages. The fallen nations are still fallen. And for the first time in American history, citizens are arguing over whether charity might not turn out eventually to be a slap in Uncle Sam's face.

The need is unmistakably there.
Sensitization that this alone is sufficient reason for helping. But should the United States ask the British to relax their blockade of the continent and obtain a solemn promise from Berlin that food shipments to France and Belgium and the Netherlands and other conquered territories will not be appropriated by the Nazis?

Opponents scoff. Promises! Has Hitler ever been known to keep his solemn pledges? And even if he meant to keep this one, does it seem likely that he would watch unwaveringly the feeding of the conquered while the German people, the conquerors, subsist on insufficient rations?

No matter, say those who favor aid to Europe. Unless Americans display humanitarianism, they point out, this country will sink in moral pressure. The act of feeding Europe cannot directly influence the conduct of the war, they maintain.

Oh, can't it? ask the opponents.
Suppose there is no food this winter. Hungry people become desperate.
And desperate people revolt. Let Hitler feed them. Even meager rations of food among Europe's vanquished will keep them in a state of beaten lethargy.

Americans can never completely close their hearts. Even those who most violently resist the idea of relieving Europe's suffering must wince when they think of the hardships among innocent civilians. They take their stand not because they are ruthless and barbarous but because they believe that stoicism to suffering now will work toward the ultimate preservation of liberty.

It's a difficult decision to make. What ever conclusion we reach, it will take years before anyone can determine whether it was the right one.

To Enjoy Life More, Build Up Pleasant Constellations of Ideas

This is one of a series of special articles revealing typical causes of nervous and mental disorders and their treatment through thought control as carried out by the author and his associates at the (Boston Dispensary), famous charitable health clinic.

By WINFRED RHOADES

One of the useful conceptions of present-day psychology is that of a "constellation" of ideas. Every idea has others associated with it.

It is impossible to think of the original idea—or even to have it subconsciously alive in your mind—without being influenced by your reaction-tendencies by associated ideas.

An illustration will help to make this clear. Around the idea of milk, in Mrs. G's mind, was this constellation of associated ideas: "I don't like milk"—"I don't like the taste of milk"—"Milk brings out a rash on me"—"I can't drink milk"—"I won't drink milk."

That, it is easy to perceive, was a bad constellation of ideas. Everything was negative. Everything helped to produce a revulsion to milk. It is not difficult to understand why Mrs.
G. was starving herself to death when it is revealed that similar constellations of ideas were associated with other kinds of food.

What was done with Mrs. G. was to help her to build up a new and better constellation of ideas. "Milk is a needed food"—"It is easy to digest"—"Milk is delicious"—"I didn't drink it with entire safety"—"I will drink it"—"Here goes!"

She began to drink milk, and she did not have the rash. It was similar with other foods. Her dissatisfaction with life, and her expectation of bad effects from foods, those things, and not the foods themselves, had been the cause of the difficulties she experienced.

You can apply the idea in many ways. Take the matter of sleep. Here is a bad constellation of ideas to take to bed with you: "Oh, how I dread these hours in bed!"—"I know I shall lie awake and think about all my problems!"—"I shall toss and turn all night!"—"I shall be more tired when morning comes than I am now!"
—"Oh, how nervous I feel!"—"I'm going to turn on my light and read."

If you go to bed with such thought and expectations clustered about the fering now will work toward the ultimate preservation of liberty.

It's a difficult decision to make. What
years before anyone can determine whether it was the right one.

Idea of sleep is it any wonder if you lie awake? Build up, instead, such a constellation as this: "My body needs rest and so does my mind." "How good it is to go to bed!"—"I will draw down the curtain of my mind and shut out all thoughts!"—"In the morning I shall feel refreshed." Your expectations will lead you to have a good night.

Here is another application of the idea. Day after day when your work is over you suffer from headache, irritability, tears, nagging pains, a feeling of utter exhaustion. The trouble may come from your relations with your employer.

The thought of him brings up this constellation of associated ideas: "He's always finding fault!"—"He picks me out more than anyone else!"—"I don't like him!"—"I'm afraid of him!"—
"I can't stand it any longer!"—"I shall break down if I don't leave."

With such ideas in your head all the while you may indeed break down, and anyway you make it much harder to do your work. You must build up a new and better constellation: "My boss provides me with my job!"—"He pays me my salary regularly!"—"I will try to understand him better!"—"I'm mighty lucky to have the job!"—"I will do my best to please my boss and not let other things matter."

That new constellation of ideas will not only help you to do your work better but will also react healthily upon your physical condition.

Aid-to-Britain Committee Backs Drive to Defeat Hamilton Fish

WASHINGTON — One of the most interesting scraps of the campaign is getting warmed up in-of all places —the rock-ribbed Republican stronghold which is the home district of Congressman Hamilton Fish.

On form, Fish ought to win. The votes have given him 10 straight terms, the last by a 30,000 majority.
But this 1940 thing is kind of unusual.

First, the district includes FDR's own Dutchess county. Second, a lot of good Republicans (with Eleanor Roosevelt's assistance), are working to bring about Fish's downfall. Third, the fight makes an earnest attempt by the William Allen White committee to defeat the most vocal isolationist in the house of representatives.

Democratic candidate opposing Fish is Hardy Steeholm, chairman of the Dutchess county unit of the White committee. Good, honest Republicans on the White committee have gone to the length of canvassing the Harvard club in New York City to drum up opposition to Harvard-graduate Fish.

Fish is still doped to win, but the White people figure if they can just change one vote in six they can beat him.

Scrap Over NLBB Scrap
A terrific under-cover scrap is being waged over the question of who gets J. Warren Madden's job on the labor board.

The C. I. O. high command is working hard for Madden's reappointment. So, also, are most of the inner-circle New Dealers, who are urging the President (a) that Madden has got to be reappointed in order to make sure of John Lewis' support in the election, and (b) that since the big industrialists never liked Madden the whole thing is a test of the New Deal's general high mindedness and devotion to labor, etc.

On the other side are divers groups, including the American Federation of Labor, which dislikes some of the industrial union decisions the board has handed down. William Green called at the White House recently and developed a pair of remarkably who came down here to take charge of the job. About half the $300,000 aliens in the country have already been signed up and considerably less than half of the four months allotted to the job has been used up; the thing should be finished nicely by the end of the year, even though a let-down is expected when the draft-registration period sets in.

As the cards come in, they go to immigration service and FBI for checking. The officials expect they'll uncover quite a few cases of illegal entry which they hadn't known about before; chances are, though, that any alien who is behaving himself and working hard won't get into much trouble even if he is here illegally.

One thing, it's impossible to deport most European aliens nowadays.
Queerest quirk in the program is developed recently in Georgia, where an alien who showed up for fingerprinting offered a hand which had two thumbs. There was only room for one thumb print on the card, so the clerk couldn't figure out what thumb to print. (P. S. He finally both, using a second card, just to be sure.)

German imports of Holland tulbulbs this year are four times the usual amount.

Louisiana to Hold Fair

Annual State Fair, Shreveport, October 19-28

SHREVEPORT, La. — The Agricultural Show of the Louisiana State Fair, to be held October 19-28, inclusive, will provide for State Fair visitors one of the most educational displays yet presented. With the cooperation and assistance of the State Department of Extension, each agricultural exhibit will reveal the best methods now used to give maximum production as well quality products and will also show the many ways that agricultural products are manufactured and processed for commercial uses.

As an example, cotton will be shown from the time it is sown until produced. Then, through the various stages, State Fair visitors will be shown how this product is used in the many commercial and industrial uses that it is put. Patrons will be shown the many channels such products must go through in order to ultimately be turned into the finished article.

Sugar cane and other agricultural products that are produced in Louisiana will be shown in the Louisiana State Fair Agricultural Show in the same manner as cotton will be displayed.

Outstanding in the Agricultural Show will be the Chemurgic pronounced (Kemurjic) Exhibit. This display covering approximately 1200 square feet of floor space will bring to the farm people as well as those who are not farmers, the many startling uses that agricultural products are put to in the industrial and commercial life of our Nation. The Chemurgic Exhibit will prove very interesting to State Fair visitors and the Management urges that everyone who possibly can should plan to see this display.

In the Polish campaign, 500; in Norway, Holland and Belgium, 400; by the French Air Force, 1000; by the U. S. Army Air Corps, 400; over England, 4000; miscellaneous losses, 400.

These 23,000 airplanes which can conceivably be mustered, indicates that Germany at the start of her aerial blitz of four weeks ago was at least as strong numerically as in September 1939.

SERIAL STORY

NEW YORK JUNGLE

BY WRAY WADE SEVERN

COPYRIGHT, 1940, NEA SERVICE, INC.

YESTERDAY, Barker, the character, today, reports seeing a green sedan. He is unable to identify it, or the men in it. He surmises, Sidney, by name, or by car, a man, Mrs. Langdon insisted that he be armed.

NEW EVIDENCE

CHAPTER IX

WHEN the police finally arrived, W. Sidney met them alone. Pat had asked it, and the others had readily consented. As the family lawyer, it had seemed logical to allow him to do the talking.

There were two officers: Sergeant O'Connor, tall and alert, and his superior, Captain Plowman, the state police. Plowman's broad, impressive face was devoid of personal expression. Sidney was relieved when the officers reported a green sedan had passed them, and that a fallen tree had forced them to skid. He did not want to see Barker needlessly involved.

Quickly, Braitwood related the facts as he knew them. He told of Adam's return from Africa on a ship, other than that he had cabled he was sailing on; his surprise marriage; the kinship of the guests to the murdered man. He did not dwell on Maria's broken love affair, nor did he stress the fact that Gundrum had been engaged to Pat. Sidney told his story as he imagined each one of them would have told it.

Coming to tonight, the lawyer reviewed the dinner and Adam's pleasure in his new trophies. While they were having coffee in the Jungle, they had found themselves locked in; Hugh had shot the lock; the men had gone in search of the supposed robber.

Then, Sidney went on, a scream had brought them back to the Jungle. They had found Adam dead and Maria unconscious at his feet.

He touched briefly Nella's neurosis concerning fire and his hunt with Hugh for the blaze. He also recalled Pat's search for her pearls, and his own regret that they all had been unable to remain together, despite their agreement.

"Then the chauffeur was the only member of the household who could have locked the rest of you in?" Plowman asked.

"Yes, but he had driven to the village."

"Say he did return," Plowman persisted. "Could he have escaped through the open door in the dark, while you were looking for matches?"

HOW quickly Gundrum's theory had turned up. In this case a suspect was attached to it and Barker, in Sidney's opinion, was innocent. He decided to tell the truth.

"Possible but not probable, Captain Plowman. I didn't move from the door myself, and though it was dark, I'm sure I should have heard anyone leave."

"Where's the car the chauffeur used?" Plowman demanded.

"I imagine it must be in the garage at the end of the rear garden."

"O'Connor, the captain ordered, 'Check that car.'"

"Now where's the dead man?"

As they passed into the darkness of the lower hall, Plowman kept a powerful flashlight playing on the walls and floor in front of them.

"You heard footsteps out here?" he asked.

"I didn't hear them myself, but Miss Langdon did. Her senses are abnormally keen. Mr. Gundrum thought he heard someone, too."

Before the storeroom Plowman stopped. "You didn't mention a dog."

"A dog? There was no dog here," Sidney was astonished.

"There has been a small dog here, recently. It was put down here for a few moments where it stood obediently, and then picked up again. If you look you will see where it stood. Whoever held it had dry feet, but the dog did not." The light focused on the floor.

There were prints of wet paws. "They may have been made some time ago," the lawyer suggested. "Langdon has never allowed a dog near his collection. They are apt to attack the animals."

Plowman ran his hand over the fine-grained oak of the door. "This door has been here a long time. Key must be large, judging from the type of lock."

"Truly, I can't recall ever seeing a key," Sidney told him.

"Lock has been oiled recently; key would have turned without a click," the captain of the state troopers went on as if talking to himself.

FOR several minutes Plowman studied the body of Adam Langdon, the position, the hole in his shirt front, the block on which he had stood; then he turned his attention to the broken window.

"With this downpour it will be impossible to find a footprint outside, even if someone had shot from the window," Sidney suggested.

"He's right, Captain." Sergeant O'Connor hurried into the Jungle, his raincoat dripping. "I've just given the place the once-over. I saw that broken window and investigated. There's been a vino, next to the house, kicked away recently."

Plowman nodded. "What did you get on the car?"

"Mileage shows eight and a quarter miles, about the distance to the village and back, sir. The color of the mud on the tires, some oil and tar check with the condition of the roads. I found three dark dog hairs on the seat beside the chauffeur and kept them." His report finished, O'Connor peered about the room.

"Who stood near the door after the servant returned with the globe?" Plowman demanded.

"Miss Hemphfield and Mr. Langdon. Later they crossed to the new lioness. The rest of us were at the coffee table, though there was some moving about just before that. Really, I can't recall exactly what each person did."

"Then, after the lights went out and you were all armed, Mr. Langdon returned to the lioness?"

"Evidently. But the ladies remained at the coffee table. No doubt Langdon thought he could get a good shot if anyone tried to rush the door. The lioness is in direct line with it."

A faint gleam rose and died in Plowman's eyes. He turned his flash on the mouth of the new lioness, and drew out an old-fashioned key.

"Up stepped," Sidney breathed. "It must be the key to the Jungle and if it is, then—"

"Then it looks as if some person who was in the Jungle locked the door," Plowman said with faint irony.

IT flashed into Braitwood's mind that Maria and Adam himself had had the best opportunity to lock the door and hide the key.

"Professor Gundrum spent some time fumbling about the lioness. He lifted Langdon's coat to see how far the scimitar had penetrated," he told Plowman through dry lips. "Togi could have slipped down here after he had gone to his room with an attack of nausea. Not that I believe he did, but it could have happened."

Plowman nodded. "This man was killed with a Lilliput, judging from the size of the bore. Make a search for it, O'Connor, and fix his heel marks on the block so that we can tell how far he swung after being shot."

"I've found the gun already, Captain," O'Connor said. "It's a little bit of a gat. It just fitted into the upturned mitt of that ugly brute of a monkey next the door."

Baptist Meet Nears Close

Largest Week-Night Crowd Attends Wednesday

To the largest week night crowd which has thus far packed the auditorium of the First Baptist church since the Revival began Dr. C. C. Warren Wednesday evening stated that "Americans were going to consider some things more seriously now than they have for many years—they need to consider more seriously their relationship with God."

The Revival continues through Sunday, but Dr. Warren's last sermon is to be preached Friday night. Services will be held Thursday and Friday nights at 7:30 and Friday morning at 9:30.

Dr. Warren in preaching Wednesday evening on "Our Relationship to God as Experienced in Religion" read the story of Paul's preaching to the Athenians about their tribute to the unknown God was Christ. Dr. Warren showed by illustration and example that there is a universal seeking after God. Even in some countries religion has been outlawed but the craving in man's heart can never be outworn.

"Man will never outgrow religion," said Dr. Warren. "All men are seeking after a God. In spite of differences of opinion about religion there are some things that everyone is looking for. Some of these things are: A religion that is divine, not one that is man made but one that is greater than man; a religion that gives safe and sane guidance in life; a religion that is practical—that can be used in everyday life; a religion that they can enjoy; a religion that gives comfort; a religion that we can share; a religion that gives strength when we are almost to the breaking point; a religion that will give us some hope at the time of death.

"That religion that everyone is seeking is found in Christ. As Paul said, 'Whom ye worship ignorantly, Him I declare unto you.' Christ is divine. The prophets told about him long before He came to earth—He Himself said, 'I and the Father are one.' He gives a safe and sane direction in life. The person who follows Christ is the sanest person on earth at all times. His is a practical religion—it works in business as testified by many who have made a real success in life, such as Kraft and John W. Wannamaker. If you want to be the best of whatever you are, take Christ in as a partner. His is a religion of comfort—His words 'I will not leave you comfortless' have been proven over and over again.

This religion can be shared with others because the very essence of it is sharing. It is a religion that gives strength. When our strength fails He is right there to lift us up and give us strength to carry on. His strength gives hope at the time of death. All of the religions of the world from the beginning of time have hoped for eternal life or a life after death, but only the religion of Christ gives an assurance of it.

"When Christ is put into the center of our lives all the other relationships of life adjust themselves; but if Christ does not have the proper place in our lives they are never really

Hornets Working Hard for Game Friday Afternoon

BLEVINS, Ark. — Coach George Hunter has been putting his charges through long workouts this week in preparation for their game with Murfreesboro at Blevins Friday afternoon at 2 o'clock.

The coach was well pleased with the showing his boys made against Arkadelphia last week, when they held the favored Arkadelphians to a scoreless tie.

The passing combination of Porter to Nolen was outstanding and produced a record with 14 of 15 passes being completed, nothing approximately 125 yards.

Hunter will drill the Blevins boys on a ground attack, so anything might be expected Friday afternoon. Everyone is invited.

Blevins to Play Murfreesboro

Hornets Working Hard for Game Friday Afternoon

BLEVINS, Ark. — Coach George Hunter has been putting his charges through long workouts this week in preparation for their game with Murfreesboro at Blevins Friday afternoon at 2 o'clock.

The coach was well pleased with the showing his boys made against Arkadelphia last week, when they held the favored Arkadelphians to a scoreless tie.

The passing combination of Porter to Nolen was outstanding and produced a record with 14 of 15 passes being completed, nothing approximately 125 yards.

Hunter will drill the Blevins boys on a ground attack, so anything might be expected Friday afternoon. Everyone is invited.

Tired Kidneys Often Bring Sleepless Nights

Doctors say your kidneys contain 15 miles of tiny tubes or filters which help to purify the blood and keep you healthy. When they get tired and don't work right in the daytime, many people have to get up nights. Frequent urination, passages with smarting and burning sometimes show there is something wrong with your kidneys or bladder. Don't neglect this condition and lose valuable, restful sleep.

When disorder of kidney function permits poisonous matter to remain in your blood, it may also cause nagging headache, rheumatic pains, leg pains, loss of pep and energy, swelling, puffiness under the eyes, headaches and dizziness.

Don't wait! Ask your druggist for Doan's Pills, used successfully by millions for over 40 years. They give happy relief and will keep the 15 miles of kidney tubes fresh and free from waste from your blood. Get Doan's Pills.

Modern Bean Pot

Economical straight-line production methods are employed in the canned pork and bean department of the Kroger Grocery and Baking company factory in Cincinnati, Ohio, illustrated in this photograph. Rigid inspections are made throughout the process while the beans are hand sorted, cleaned, cooked, canned, labeled and packed in shipping cases. This product will be featured during the insured value carnival sale now in progress at all Kroger stores.

These five cities, plus the industrial town of Newcastle, 145,000 and Canberra the capital, 10,000, comprise half of Australia's population.

So, take an area equal to all of the United States, scatter a mere three and a half million people (the population of Chicago) over the vast interior, and you have a faint idea of what Australia is like.

The comparison, however, isn't as simple as that. The big difference is not a mere lack of population in

Bureau Chief Likes Work

Child Labor Head Never Learned to Play

By GERRY DICK
NEA Service Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON — If Katherine Lenroot had not rebelled against parental authority she might have become a charming, but not particularly useful, member of Capital society today.

Because she did rebel, she is Chief of the U. S. Department of Labor's Children's Bureau and 1940 winner of the Parents' Magazine Medal for Outstanding Service to Children.

When she was only in her teens, Katherine Lenroot, under the direction of the University of Wisconsin's renowned progressive, Professor John Commons, was drafting minimum wage legislation. This was later presented to the state legislature, of which her father was then a member.

Couldn't Stand Not Working

He came to Washington a year or so later as a U. S. Senator and wanted his daughter to put labor relations out of her head and have a gay holiday away from her books. Reluctantly she followed her parents to the capital and promised to stay a year.

But after six months of gaiety in the Capital, Miss Lenroot persuaded her parents to let her go back to Wisconsin.

She passed the State civil service examinations and went to work for the newly-formed State Industrial Commission as a factory inspector. Later she made a survey of several hundred rooming houses in Milwaukee as her contribution to a cost-of-living survey.

A young woman on the Commission staff, with whom she shared an apartment, was interested in the work of the newly created Children's Bureau of the Department of Labor, and took a civil service examination to qualify for a Washington job. Just for fun Miss Lenroot took the examination too. Both girls passed, and in 1915 Katherine Lenroot returned to Washington, not to play, but to work for her former roommate in the Social Service Division of the Children's Bureau.

Now Chief of that Bureau, Miss Lenroot's job is to coordinate the work of her staff, and to keep in touch with State Children's Bureaus. She also manages to solve the problems of children of her acquaintance.

Seldom Has a Vacation

Miss Lenroot is at her office desk from 9 to 6 every day and often spends Sunday there.

She flies from Washington to speaking engagements throughout the United States and confesses that at first flying made her nervous, but that she has overcome her timidity.

Serious-minded and immensely capable, Miss Lenroot seldom allows her-covers a beat of 25,000 square miles with a force of 40 men. They don't have much trouble with cattle thieves, because there isn't place to take a stolen herd.

U. S. Buys Most Australian Gold

At Darwin in 1914, an enterprising British meat packing company built a $5,000,000 plant to process the beef products closer to the cattle stations. It operated three years, making canned meats for war supplies.

Then labor trouble beset the company and the plant stands here today, deserted, biggest thing on the Port Darwin landscape, a monument to folly.

There is gold in Australia's interior, the first strike coming in 1851, two years after California's gold rush. The mines in western Australia produce nearly $45,000,000 of gold a year now, $40,000,000 of it going to the United States.

Natives Dance, Toss Boom-rangs

Fences across this land are few and far between, and so are railroads. There are more miles of fences than railroads, and the railroad "system" is of three different gauges. If you get "back" the easiest thing to do is fly, then take a horse.

In the more remote sections are some 50,000 of the aboriginal blacks, many of them nomads. A few are in compounds near frontier cities, and have been gradually civilized to jobs as houseboys and such.

When tourists come, the blacks will throw a corroboree, putting on their war paint, casting a spear, throwing a boomerang, beating a drum and doing a dance, pounding the hard ground with their bare feet in a wicked rhythm that sounds above the drums and the "didgeridoo" music.

Cheap Labor Betted

The aborigines are a vanishing race let 'em vanish, for whatever future Australia has, it will be as a white man's country.

Ideas have been advanced to bring in cheap labor and exploit the interior. As northern Australia is tropical and the interior just naturally hot, dry desert, only black races can survive the climate.

To all such ideas, Australian capital and Australian labor has turned a deaf ear. Japs, Hiaus, Chinese and the Malayans races have been practically excluded. Selected white immigrants—agricultural workers who know dry farming, skilled workmen for crafts which Australian labor cannot supply—are welcome, but the commonwealth will have no employing of London slums, thank you.

Whether or not the just work to Australia's advantage remains to be seen. Given normal times, there will develop a new white man's empire in lands that have always been black or brown. But with a war on, Australia needs manpower.

From her population of seven million Australia can raise a fighting force of perhaps 250,000 men. When they are exhausted in war, Australia is through.

If Australia is to defend herself, she must have more people, and before she can support more people, some way must be found to give the country more water for the back blocks.

Chicago's Century of Sin Is New Asbury Theme

Herbert Asbury has been seeking out sin for a long time now, and he has managed to corral a lot of it between the covers of "French Quarter," "The Barbary Coast," "Suckers' Progress" and other books. But hardly do any of his earlier findings seem to stand up alongside his latest strike, "Gem of the Prairie" (Knopf; $3.50), an informal history of the Chicago Underworld. Beginning with the first gamblers about 1830, Asbury traces the whole bizarre, and often sordid, story down to Al Capone. It is invariably interesting, but even your best friends may be shocked by it. Follows a bit from Asbury's colorful description of early Chicago: "Most of the stores and dwellings in Chicago of this period were of jogs and no paving of any description, and the heavy traffic and frequent rains transformed the roads and footpaths into quagmires through which travel was frequently dangerous and often impossible."

Charles Cleave, a pioneer Chicago manufacturer, recalled that he had often seen teams mired in the mud. I remember once," he said, "a stagecoach got mired on Clark street, where it remained several days, with a load driven in the mud at the side of it bearing the inscription, 'No bottom here.'"

A pedestrian being pulled out of the mud was a commonplace spectacle, and wags adorned the street crossings with

Merit in Meals That Will Wait

Don't Get Jittery If Family Is Late to Dinner

By MRS. ALEXANDER GEORGE
AP Feature Service Writer

Don't get jittery if members of your family frequently are late for dinner. The meal need not be ruined. Plan dinners that do not mind waiting.

Then you can take care of such emergencies as the after-school practice or the football game that delays the children.

Have soups, stews, vegetables, gravies and sauces that can be reheated over low heat or in a double boiler.

Rolls keep warm for some time if tucked under a cloth or in a bun warmer near heat.

A 30-minute wait means nothing to escalloped dishes, meat or fish loaves, or vegetable pot pie when kept in a pan of warm water over low heat. Quick breads are usually best served as soon as baked. Make them up ready for the oven and store in the refrigerator until the slamming front door announces the arrival of the family.

When you think the dinner may be held up, make up Creole Green Peppers. Cut 6 large peppers lengthwise in halves and discard the seeds and pulp. Stuff with 2 cups boiled rice mixed with 1/2 cup bread crumbs, a cup of leftover meat, fish, or fowl; 2 tablespoons melted butter and 1 tablespoon of catsup. Season lightly with chopped onions, parsley, salt and paprika. Bake 35 minutes in a moderate oven. Bake a fruit cobbler or fruit dessert along with the peppers and serve warm or cold.

For a vegetable treat bake sweet potatoes with oranges. For 2 cups of sliced cooked potatoes add a sliced orange, 1/4 teaspoon ground orange rind, 2 tablespoons dark brown sugar, 2 tablespoons melted butter, a little salt and pepper and 2 tablespoons boiling water. Arrange slices in layers in a buttered baking dish and add the rest of the ingredients. Bake 30 minutes in moderate oven.

Salmon loaf bellini can be kept in a pan of hot water on stove or it can be reheated in a moderate oven. Mix a pound can of salmon with 1 cup soft bread crumbs, 1 egg or 2 yolks, 1 tablespoon chopped celery, 1/2 teaspoon salt and 1/4 teaspoon each of pepper, celery seed and chopped parsley. Pour in 1/2 cup milk and 3 tablespoons melted butter. Bake 35 minutes in a greased loaf pan in moderate oven.

More than 150,000,000 gallons of crude oil are moved daily to U. S. refineries, signs reading: "To the lower regions," and "The shortest road to China."
